The Wright Institute Doctor of Psychology Program invites applications for three full-time (10 month) tenure track faculty positions. These positions will begin with the 2016-2017 academic year.

Qualifications being sought for these positions include the expertise and qualifications to teach two or more of the following subjects: Biological aspects of behavior, Cognitive aspects of behavior, Affective aspects of behavior, Social aspects of behavior, Psychological measurement, Developmental aspects of behavior across the lifespan, Research methods and Statistics, and History and systems of psychology. Applicants with expertise in any one of the areas listed above in addition to experience and expertise in the teaching and practice of integrated health care will also be welcomed. Applicants must hold a doctoral degree in clinical psychology or another doctoral discipline relevant to the areas outlined above. Applicants with doctorates in Clinical, Counseling or School Psychology must have attended an APA accredited graduate program, APA approved internship program, and be license eligible or licensed as a psychologist.

Applicants must demonstrate the ability to engage students through excellence in teaching and research skills (through dissertation chairing, publications and/or presentations), as well as have a commitment to multiculturalism and to diverse student and faculty bodies. The potential for sponsored research is a plus. Minority applicants and applicants from under-represented populations are encouraged to apply. The Wright Institute is an Equal Opportunity Employer and is committed to recruiting and retaining a diverse faculty.

Full-time faculty typically teach 8 trimester courses per year (courses are taught weekly for 3 hours per class for 10-13 weeks.) Other activities include but are not limited to chairing dissertation research, governance service, admissions activities, mentorship of students, and scholarship.

The salary range for these positions is competitive and will be determined by experience.

Applications for these positions will be reviewed beginning in December 2015. The positions will remain open until they are filled. Applications should be submitted digitally to Jessika Hines-Shroder at jhines-schroder@wi.edu, and include the following:

- Letter of interest outlining your teaching interests and pedagogy, and your scholarly interests
- Curriculum vitae
- Syllabi with course evaluations (or other demonstrations of teaching effectiveness)
- Graduate school transcripts if doctorate has not yet been awarded or was received within the past four years
- Sample Peer-reviewed publications, book chapters and/or professional presentations
- Three letters of reference
